Youth Voice in Community Schools: Building Collaborative School Leadership Structures

Tuesday, January 24, 2:00 – 3:00 PM Eastern Time
Translating Research into Practice

Research needs to be accessible to practitioners, must be responsive to practitioners’ needs, and must accurately reflect practice. Research should support the feedback loop between data and decision-making. One key lever in this process is data democratization - making data more available. We must understand how to effectively collect and share program participation data across agencies and partners. This includes best practices around data-sharing agreements, data-sharing software, and other tools.

Defining and Supporting Roles

Another primary theme from our discussion concerns the roles of the different community school partners/constituents. The main interest is in defining the unique roles of the teacher, administrator, and coordinator, as well as family and community members in the community school setting.

Organizing

More research is needed to understand the value of community organizing for sustaining and supporting community school implementation. There is a need to understand how grassroots community organizing is present in the daily work of community schools and how it could be.

Thrive by 25: Improving Well-Being for Youth and Young Adults

All young people ages 14–24 and their children have the family connections, relationships, communities and educational and employment opportunities necessary for their well-being and success.
Why Youth and Young Adults?

- Critical developmental period in a young person’s life that creates the foundation for later success
- Research reveals opportunities for behavior change that should inform practice and policy decisions
- Young adults are the parents of the very young children we know need a good start
- Unique opportunity to develop and advocate for solutions with young people, not just for them
Why Support the Youth Voice in Community Schools Guide?

- Build on the strong evidence-based, equity focused approach
- Learn more about current youth leadership practices in community schools across the country
- Provide practical and actionable guidance for youth-serving practitioners to support youth leadership
The Coalition for Community Schools supports the growth, quality, and unification of Community Schools by catalyzing collaboration across communities and states; cultivating the quality of Community Schools and systems; and celebrating the successes of students, families, and communities.

Grounded in practicing our principles:

- BUILD ON COMMUNITY STRENGTHS
- INVEST IN TRUSTING RELATIONSHIPS
- COMMIT TO CONTINUOUS IMPROVEMENT

And will be achieved through three core strategies:
Youth Voice in Community Schools

The Development of the Guide
1. Recognize youth voice as a community asset and critical elements of effectively engaging youth

2. Illuminate best practices for meaningful engagement of youth in Community Schools

3. Provide Community Schools practitioners with essential strategies and steps to advance their student engagement efforts
Methods

1. Literature Review
2. Data Collection
   - Time: March-May 2022
   - A national network survey
   - Virtual sessions with youth from 6 partnering high schools
3. Data Analysis
4. Framework Development
Framework for Youth Voice, Engagement, and Leadership in Community Schools
